

Then... and Now!

Nellie McClung and the Family Herald and Weekly Star

In her recent autobiography "Clearing in the West", Nellie McClung, pioneer girl of the covered wagon days, now a director of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, makes frequent and affectionate reference to the "Old" Family Herald and Weekly Star—the paper that has since grown to be Canada's National Farm Magazine.

The Family Herald must have exercised a great influence on the pioneer girl who was destined to become a well-loved writer, for she writes:

"The Family Herald from Montreal brought the world to our door": "We read in the Family Herald that there were riots in the streets of Montreal" (this was the execution of Louis Riel: "Always there was the Family Herald with its great wealth of reading...")

These are but a few of the references to the Family Herald made in "Clearing in the West."

And ever since those early days, the Family Herald and Weekly Star has continued to be a guide, philosopher and friend. As times have changed, so has the Family Herald changed, new features being added from time to time to meet new conditions. For example, with the more general use of electricity and many farmers modernizing their buildings, the Family Herald has been quick to inaugurate a "Power, Buildings and Mechanics" department which, by supplying practical ideas, in saving farmers untold money.

Nellie McClung has written of the value of the Family Herald to those of the pioneer days. The value of the Family Herald to the modern farmer and his family has perhaps been best expressed by farmer William Burgess who says: "My wife and I always reckon the farmer who takes his local paper for the LOCAL news and the FAMILY HERALD for FARM news, stories and home features, gets the very best value his dollars will buy."

Hidden Taxation

The recent announcement that the national revenues of Canada for the first ten months of the current year showed an increase of more than $66,000,000 over the same period a year ago, coupled with the assertion that each month's balance sheet brings the possibility of a balanced budget nearer is undoubtedly cause for gratification, in Ottawa at least.

The same announcement also reported a decrease of nearly $12,000,000 in expenditures for the same period; in other words a net gain to the budget of approximately $78,000,000 and when revenues and expenditures were offset one against the other, a surplus of $23,000,000 was shown, which, it was stated, may be wiped out by special heavy expenditures for relief and the C.N.R. deficit when the fiscal year ends on March 31.

A Proper Principle

From a strictly financial viewpoint, unquestionably a balanced budget or, to go a little farther, an excess of income over expenditure is a good thing whether it appears in the financial statement of a government unit, a private corporation or an individual. The principle has been recognized as a proper one for a long time. Charles Dickens, it will be remembered, pointed out the advantage, in terms of happiness at least, of an excess of revenue over expenditure, even if only a minute balance on the right side, when he quoted Micawber's now historic remark on the subject. If the principle of making both ends meet, or overlap a little, is sound in the case of the individual, it is equally sound in the administration of corporate affairs, private or governmental.

A surplus of revenue over expenditure is usually regarded as a hall mark of prosperity and the showing made by the Federal finances during the current fiscal year to date will undoubtedly be considered a symbol of financial recovery for the country as a whole.

Two Methods Of Approach

In governmental administration there are two roads which lead towards the goal of equilibrium between income and outgo. One of these is the path of reduced expenditures; the other, and sometimes the more easy one, is the broad road of greater revenues. The former is the real test of efficiency, so long as it is not carried beyond the point which would cause rejection, if the "penny wise, pound foolish" test were applied to it.

On the other hand governments are wont to congratulate themselves when the money tinkles in the cash register in increasing volume on the ground that it is a sign of increasing prosperity and prosperity, of course, they say, is due to the policies of the administration that happens to be in office at the time, which may or may not be true, or which may be only true in part.

Only One Source

It has been pointed out time and again, but the fact is often overlooked, that there is only one source of governmental revenue—taxation in some form or another. The money must come out of the pockets of the people ultimately, directly or indirectly. If money is flowing more freely into governmental coffers it is only because people are paying more taxes than before. It may be in the form of an increase in rates or a decrease in exemption of direct levies or it may be in the form of increased rates on indirect tariffs and charges on goods and services, or it may represent merely a larger volume of turnover of goods and services without any increase of taxation charges against them. It may be a combination of any two or more of these.

If analysis, where analysis is possible, shows that revenues represented by indirect taxation on commodities and services are increasing, due solely to a rising turnover in volume of business without changes in rate structure, then it can only be attributable to increased prosperity. If, on the other hand, increased revenues are not the concomitant of increased volume of business, but caused solely by increased prices of commodities, again without any change in rate structures, the figures may be a myth as a barometer of prosperity. In fact, they might be an index of the reverse, if it means that the taxpayers are contributing more towards the cost of government for the same amount of goods and services without a corresponding increase in the taxpayer's income to meet the additional charge.

An Element Of Guess

Unfortunately for the average taxpayer it is very difficult, if not impossible, for him to ascertain with any degree of accuracy what he is contributing towards the cost of government when it comes to indirect taxation. So far as he is concerned it is truly "hidden" taxation. Authorities may quote figures, and they frequently do, in an endeavor to enlighten him, but as these authorities invariably differ and their figures are at least partially based on estimates, the result is usually befuddlement.

Sometimes one is almost tempted to believe that it would be better for the taxpayer if all taxation were confined to the field of direct levies. It would certainly make the taxpayer tax-conscious if he knew exactly what he is contributing towards the cost of government.

Fire Started By Cat

And now it appears the family cat has to be taught along with the children not to play with matches. For it was Oscar Phaneuf's cat that was blamed for setting fire to his home in East Angus, Quebec, causing damage to the interior. The cat, nibbling at a box of matches, was blamed for the blaze.

May Judge Plays

Celebrated Canadian-Born Actress May Adjuvate Phys At Winnipeg

Margaret Anglin, celebrated Canadian-born actress, may come to Winnipeg to adjudicate the final of the Dominion Drama Festival the week of May 10, it is learned. Miss Anglin has been approached by festival heads on the matter, but so far a definite announcement of her appointment has not been made.

It was decided to have somebody from the United States to adjudicate this year's Dominion festival. Because English and French plays will be presented, the adjudicator must be a bilingualist. Col. H. C. Osborn, honorary director of the festival, recently visited New York and met Miss Anglin.

FLIN FLON

"The Story of Its Finding and Position To-day"

By PRATT KUHN

Last week we'd just started from Island Falls for Flin Flon in an outboard motor canoe—we continue our journey.

Another canoe, 24-foot, was equipped with a 14 h.p. Johnson outboard, attaining speed of 12 miles per hour for the four miles across Muddy Lake. The next portage was a long one, over two miles, but here we found rails laid out and a Plymouth gas locomotive pushed a flat car carrying the canoe and passengers across to Camp 6 where a 40-foot motor boat took us 20 miles across Barrier Lake. Lunch was served on the boat and tea was made with water boiled on the man-fold of the engine, this with evaporated milk, thick pork sandwiches and preserved peaches as desert, certainly tasted good. Reaching Camp 5 at the south end of the lake we portaged one mile, again with a tractor and wagon, driving a 24-foot, 4-cylinder gas yacht on Lake 2 that carried us to Camp 38, where we picked up the patrolman, an Icelandic named Johansson, who had just arrived, soaking wet, on the dock. We were lucky an hour late or he'd have missed us and we would have had to walk 20 or more miles. No second street car coming shortly out there!

He lived at Camp 38 but had just arrived on a patrol. Without time to speak to his wife, because he'd heard the boat coming, he grabbed a raincoat and with his sharp axe and big bag made the wharf to catch us. That day he'd seen moose and a black bear on his beat. He says moose are plentiful but the bears are hard to get them out of the country. On our way 3 1/2 miles, then portaged again 300 yards with tractor and wagon. This time we took a canoe across too, and putting on an outboard motor ran one mile on Lake One. Another mile portage, and this time the tractor was being repaired, so we hitched ourselves to the straps of a wagon and pulled it, headed with canoe and boys, over to Lake Marl.

Note the developments in 1936. See the town in the background and how that dump heap has grown!

"Now that you are married," said the bride's mother, "I suppose you will take out an insurance policy?" "Oh, no," replied the husband, airily. "I don't think she's going to be dangerous."

The fastest way to "alkalize" is to carry your alkalizer with you. That's what thousands do now that genuine Phillips' comes in tiny, peppermint flavored tablets—in a flat tin for pocket or purse. Then you are always ready.

Use it this way. Take 2 Phillips' tablets—equal in "alkalizing" effect to 2 teaspoonsful of liquid Phillips' from the bottle. At once you feel "gas," nausea, "over-crowding" from hyper-acidity begin to ease. "Acid headaches," "acid breath," over-acid stomach are corrected at the source. This is the quick way to ease your own distress—avoid offense to others.

where a nice white yacht was waiting in the boat house equipped with a six-cylinder Russell gas engine.

We telephoned from the boat house to Island Falls and they instructed us to watch a certain point where a fire fighters who were rushed up two weeks before should be ready to come out. Johansson also phoned his wife at Camp 38 through Island Falls, which acts as Central, so she might know where he was. Boy—I'd like to get lost in a forest some time for a few days where phones can't catch up with me!

The Passing Years

Changed Positions Of Russia's Czar And A Polish Pianist

On a gala afternoon the czar of all the Russias sat with his court, listening to the playing of Paderewski. Charmed by the musical genius, Nicholas expressed delight that the great pianist was a citizen of Russia.

"Your majesty," replied Paderewski, "I am not a Russian; I am a Pole."

Smiling, the czar replied, "There is no such country as Poland—now there is only Russia."

"Pardon my hasty remark," said the artist, "you speak but the truth." Then with quiet dignity he turned to his piano and played, as an encore, Chopin's "Funeral March," that wordless song of Poland's sons who had fought, seemingly in vain, for the freedom of their beloved land.

Before many years had passed, Paderewski had become the first premier of a free Poland, and Nicholas, czar of all the Russias, was no more—Christian Science Monitor.

Early Sheep Shearing

Ranchers In Arizona Found It Increased Wool Clip

Sheep ranchers in the Yuma Valley of Arizona have learned they can increase their wool clip by shearing in November, instead of in January or February, as has been customary. The innovation resulted from the discovery of one stockman, who did his clipping early last year, that he averaged about two pounds more to each sheep. He also caught an earlier, higher market and got a better price for his wool. The sheep are said to suffer no ill effects from earlier shearing. This year's total clip in the Yuma and Blythe (California) districts was almost 100,000 pounds more than normal. There are about 42,000 head of sheep kept on farms in this area.

Tramcars drawn by horses are still in use in the Isle of Man.

Platinum In Alaska

Production Last Year Was Valued At Nearly $242,000

Eleven years ago platinum was discovered at Goodnews Bay, off Bering Sea, by Charles Thorsen, a "geological" prospector. The working of deposits along certain streams by modern dragline excavators commenced in 1934, and by last summer operations had so increased as to merit the description of a rush. A bucket dredge was installed and is now in operation. Over 5,000 ounces of platinum, valued at nearly $242,000, were produced last year by the new district, and indications are that this year production will be even larger. Annual world production rarely exceeds 300,000 ounces.

Dr. J. B. Merle Jr., of the Geological Survey, found that the probable source of the Alaskan platinum is an elongated ridge seven miles by two, called Red Mountain. The platinum placers lie in an area which was not in the path of large Ice Age glaciers advancing from the mountain region northeast of Goodnews Bay, and the deposits thus escaped being gouged out and carried away.

A new note in Science says that the deposits resemble geologically the rich placers of the Ural Mountains. Like the Russian deposits, the source rock contains insufficient platinum for profitable working, but the stream beds, where platinum freed from the source rock through millions of years of erosion has collected, can be dredged for the metal profitably. This year, unless the ponds freeze up too soon, the Diesel-powered dredge will scrape up nearly 20,000 ounces of platinum metals from the bed of Platinum Creek—New York Sun.

WHAT HO!

"Is anything the matter, Crump?" asked Ernest.

"Matter, sir?"

"Matter?"

"No, sir; that is—no, sir."

"You look so downcast, Crump, that I thought—"

"I do feel seedy, sir."

"I hope you haven't had a loss, or something like that, Crump."

"Thank you, sir. The fact is I have had a loss. Elaine passed away last night."

"Your wife, Crump?"

"Oh, no, sir. I'm a single man, sir."

"One of your family?"

"Yes, sir. You might say so, sir. Elaine was my best friend for twenty years. You see, sir, I raised her from a pup up."

"A pup up?" repeated Ernest.

"Yes, sir. I taught her tricks, too. I wish you might have seen the way she used to fetch my slippers for me when I was tired at night. I don't even have to tell her that. And she'd sit up, and back, and play dead, at a word from me. But now she is gone and she'll never fetch my slippers for me again."

His voice went husky.

"I'm so sorry, Crump. What sort of dog was Elaine?"

"An old pug, sir. Of excellent family. Why, sir, her great aunt was a favorite pet of her late majesty, Queen Victoria."

"Really?"

"Yes, sir. I suppose I shouldn't take it so hard, but we understood each other so well. I knew the end would be that. Six months ago she had a slight stroke and could never move very much after that. She used to lie in her little basket beside the fire-place in my room, and, ill as she was, she always managed to wag her tail when I came near her. It wasn't much of a wag, sir, but we both knew it was the best she could do. My room wasn't seem so cheery any more without her lying there in her little basket, looking up at me."

He poked a finger in a corner for dust, found some, and became a butler again.

"I must speak to Sloat," he said. "He will neglect the corners."

"Where is Elaine now?"

"Still lying in her bed, sir. I was up with her most of the night. She did not go away until dawn. Somehow I couldn't bring myself to move her from her old place. She looked so natural, lying there. The interment will be held at four to-day, in the lower garden."

"I know how you feel, Crump, and you have my sincere sympathy," Ernest said.

"Thank you, sir. And now, if you will excuse me, I must find young Sloat and give him a wigging about his dusting."

Once again he donned his butler's mask and marched away in search of the offending Sloat.

An hour later Crump burst into the kitchen to wild-weep with consternation and ire that the alarmed Mrs. Featherby screamed and dropped a dish of plum-duff.

"Oh, Cecil, whatever is the matter?" she cried. "Pier? Murder?"

"She's gone," he croaked. "Elaine is gone."

"Do you mean her—remains?"

"Yes. They have been spirited away."

"The ghost!" wailed Mrs. Featherby. "I must have been the ghost."

"Unthinkable," said Crump. "Our ghost is the ghost of a gentleman in his lifetime. Sir Rufus Bingley would never have played so scurvy a trick and I cannot believe he would permit his ghost to do this monstrous thing. Besides, it is not the season for our ghost. No, Sylvia, this is the work of some fiend in human form."

"Mercy on us, a fiend? Oh, why did I leave Tooting Bec?"

"A fiend," said Crump, "is indicated."

"My son Oliver, him that's doing so well with his fish-and-chip shop in Chelmsford, used to read the story-shockers about the Wild West," said the cook.

"My dear Sylvia," said Crump, tartly, "I fail to see what your son's taste in reading has to do with the ghost, or ghosts, responsible for the kidnapping of the earthly remains of Elaine."

"You needn't be shirty, Cecil," returned Mrs. Featherby. "I was going on to say that I read in one of those books that red Indians eat dogs."

"Are you suggesting—"

"I am."

"It is a theory well worth consideration," said Crump. "My observations lead me to conclude that he is capable of practically anything. A man, and an American at that, who moves into a castle without a single evening shirt, who yodels and sneezes and pinches himself, who goes clanking about the halls at dawn in the family armor, who spends a night in the dungeon in chains just to see what the prisoner felt like, who—" Crump ran out of breath.

"And he talks to the frogs in the moat," said the cook, taking up the litany, "using words like 'Gadzooks' and 'Od's Bodkins' and other American expressions. I'm glad to say I don't know the meaning of it, and he asked me to save nice for him—"

"Mice?"

"Mice!"

"Live ones?"

"Live ones."

"What for?"

"To train," said the cook. "He has five in a box under his bed this minute, and he plays waltzes to them on a harmonica."

"How do you know that, Sylvia?"

"Sloat saw him," she said. "Such a man, my dear Cecil, is not to be trusted."

"I don't trust him," said Crump. "But I do not believe he devoured Elaine. He had such a hearty breakfast, and I left him reading in the library. We must look elsewhere for the culprit. We must look for some one with a motive for doing so drastically a deed."

"Sloat?"

"I wonder now," said Crump. "It's possible. Why do you suggest Sloat?"

"I don't like him."

"No more do I," said Crump. "But a woman's instinct is not enough to grope a matter, my dear Sylvia. I have my reasons," she said. "Has the young smirker dared to interfere with you?" he demanded with a green-eyed scowl.

"As if I'd permit it!"

"No offense meant, Sylvia."

"Where is Elaine now?"

"Precisely what did Sloat do?"

"This," she said.

From her apron pocket she pulled a piece of paper and dramatically thrust it at Crump.

"I found it pinned to my pillow."

"Ah," exclaimed Crump, examining the words handprinted on the paper, "a poem!"

"Read it,"

He read,

"No matter if the day is dark,
No matter what the weather be,
My spirit's gone just like a hawk,
When I see Mrs. Featherby."

"Such impudence," said the inspiration of the verse, "and him not dry behind the ears yet."

"Crump examined the manuscript thoughtfully, pursing his lips and wagging his head. Presently he said,

"I could hardly have been the American," said Mrs. Featherby. "He was not here when I received it."

"He is eliminated," said Crump, and I think we may eliminate Sloat, too. This does not sound like Sloat. He is incapable of poetry."

"His lordship?"

"Certainly not," said a scandalized Crump.

"Who then? Gillis?"

"I deduce that no gardener, nearing seventy and with rheumatism in his writing hand, could have written this," stated Crump with a Sherlockholmesian look.

"Nash?"

"Not the type at all. Too busy taking care of the horses and too much afraid of that red-headed wife of his."

"But what other men are there about the place?"

Crump's neck and cheeks were suffused by a brickish hue. He avoided her eye.

"On other," he said.

"Cecil?"

"Sylvia!"

Three minutes and nine seconds later Crump disentangled himself and disappeared.

"All this, while most enjoyable, is not helping me find the scoundrel who abducted Elaine," he said. "I must recover her and give her a decent burial. All signs point to Sloat. I'll just have a word with that shy young scamp. We had a bit of a rum-puss this morning about his slack darning, and it's not the first time I've had to reprimand him."

"He came in here muttering about ruddy tyrants and finicky popinjays," said the cook.

"That tears it," cried Crump, with a fresh rush of wrath. He caught up the rolling-pin.

"Maybe Sloat did not write this."

"Stop, Cecil!"

"I'll toss the truth out of the snakey snipe," raged Crump. "I'll mangle that smirking squirt."

"Oh, Cecil, control yourself," shrieked the cook, flinging herself at him and clinging to him like an octopus to a diver. "Count ten. Have some tea. Kiss me."

"Let me go, woman," shouted Crump, trying to squirm out of the arm-lock she had clamped on him.

"Think of your position," she cried.

"Think of me."

It was an even match. Their ring-side weights were about the same, and if Crump had speed and science on his side, Mrs. Featherby had youth and strength on hers. They tugged and tussled.

The butler stopped struggling and snapped to attention. The Earl of Bingley had entered the kitchen. He was clad in a disreputable potting-smock and an unspeakable deer-stalker hat.

"Crump," said the earl, "I wish you wouldn't wrestle with Cook whilst she is preparing luncheon."

"We were not wrestling, m'lord," panted Mrs. Featherby.

WHEN your child comes down with a cold, you can't afford to take needless risks. Use the treatment that has been doubly proved for you—Vicks VapoRub.

It has been proved by everyday use in more homes than any other medication of its kind—further proved by the largest clinical tests ever made on colds. (Full details in every VapoRub package.) Only Vicks give you proof like this.

Vicks VapoRub is direct external treatment. There's no dosing—no risk of spoiling appetite, or disturbing a delicate digestion. VapoRub can be used freely as often as needed, even on the youngest child.

You simply massage VapoRub on throat, chest, and back (as illustrated). Then—to make its long-continued use even more effective—longer—spread a thick layer on the chest and cover with a warmed cloth.

No Long Waiting for Relief to begin... Almost before you finish rubbing, the youngster begins to feel warm and comfortable as VapoRub goes to work direct through the skin like a poultice. At the same time the medicated vapors, released by the warmth of the body, are carried direct to the irritated air-passages with every breath.

This double action loosens phlegm—relieves irritation and coughing—helps break up local congestion. And long after the little one relaxes into restful sleep, VapoRub keeps right on working—hour after hour. Often, by morning, the worst of the cold is over.

Air Mileage Of World

Increased From 8000 To 300,000 Miles In Nineteen Years

At the end of 1919, the first year of organized commercial flying, there were about 5,000 miles of airlines over the earth. Four years later, the total had increased more than fivefold. By 1925, the figure had risen to 34,000. In 1930, there were 150,000 miles. To-day, according to British Air Ministry figures, the world's airlines total more than 300,000, an increase in less than a score of years, of more than 100 times.

To-day's mileage is more than 12 times the circumference of the earth at the equator.

When Trans-Canada Air Lines service goes into effect between Montreal and Toronto and Vancouver, 2,650 miles will be added to the world's total. Montreal-Montreal and other lines will add more miles. At present, 130 miles are in operation between Vancouver and Seattle—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

Fireplane Invented

Bombs Dropped By Trained Crew Would Smother Flames

A time when Great Britain's fire brigades will be supplemented by air arms capable of being called into service to combat the effects of enemy raids is foreseen by James Duncan, inventor of a fireplane.

He has constructed a fire bomber which carries a trained crew of four men. Its equipment consists of foam and soda-acid fire extinguishers, portable motor pumps, a hook ladder in three sections and bomb racks holding eight bombs containing fire-detonating gases and chemicals. When dropped into a fire, the bombs would explode and smother flames.

Two New High-Powered Stations May Be Built Next Year

Two new high-powered radio stations will be built in the next year if funds are made available to the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation through increased fees, Transport Minister Howe announced in the House of Commons.

It was a matter of urgency to increase the number of high-powered stations, he said. At the recent Havana conference, Canada was allotted seven clear channels instead of six as before. But unless these channels were used by Canadian stations of at least 50,000 watts, the other countries of America had indicated they would not be respected.

Clinker Acts As Receiver

Laundry Stove Picks Up Music Just Like Radio

The stove of Mrs. W. I. Reynolds, Harrisburg, Illinois, picks up and reproduces strains of swing music. It's like a radio, except that Mrs. Reynolds can't turn it off.

It is a laundry stove in which Mrs. Reynolds uses local coal. The music is most audible at night, from 9 to 10.

Alfred Summers and K. E. Schorner, radio technicians, concluded after an examination that the burning coal formed a clinker containing a mineral that in contacting the grate served as a type of receiver similar to the crystal sets used in the early days.

LINE ELEVATORS TO INSTALL FREE LENDING LIBRARIES

Laby Tweedsmuir sponsor move to provide reading material in drought areas

The North West Grain Dealers Association acting in co operation with the Association of Canadian Bookmen have completed arrangements for setting up free lending libraries in the areas of Western Canada which have suffered from lack of rainfall. A library will be installed at one line company elevator at as many towns, villages, hamlets and sidings as the number of books collected will allow. Any member of a family will be entitled to obtain the loan of books from the library. The books are available to all regardless of which elevator system or company in the community they patronize. The providing of the library service is a joint effort of all the line elevators of each community.

The germ of the idea for these circulating libraries originated with Her Excellency The Lady Tweedsmuir and was conveyed to the Association of Canadian Bookmen who gave their enthusiastic co operation and assistance. Books are being collected through out Canada by the Bookmen's Association with the co-operation of Young Men's Sections of Boards of Trade and other organizations. Lord Tweedsmuir is Patron of the Association of Canadian Bookmen. Already some 25,000 books have been donated by public spirited citizens. The expense of housing, distribution and circulation of the books has been undertaken by the North-West Grain Dealers' Association which organization is made up of line elevator companies throughout Western Canada.

Each library will consist of 60 books made up of non fiction, children's books and fiction. As soon as the books in a library have served the needs of a community another unit will be moved into the district. In addition to the libraries, bundles of magazines are being shipped for free distribution as far as they are available. The Canadian National and the Canadian Pacific Railway companies have co-operated in making the distribution of these libraries possible. Other organizations and individuals have donated services and materials.

If a library has not already been installed in your vicinity one may be obtained by requesting one of your line country elevator agents or by writing direct to the North-West Grain Dealers' Association, Winnipeg. Libraries will be forwarded to districts first in which the need is greatest, and distribution will continue as long as books are available.

All those associated with this worthy work of making good literature available to families in the areas which have suffered through lack of rainfall in Western Canada are to be congratulated for the excellent work which they are carrying on.

Seed Available But Fodder Short

Castor (Special) - Inquiries by municipal authorities to Edmonton brought forth a reply from the supervisor of agricultural relief to the effect that arrangements are under way for the extension of credit to municipalities on the same basis as last year, so that seed may be issued under the Agricultural Relief Advances Act. The letter dated February 7, stated that where issues of feed are required, these would have to be covered by a separate bill, as the Dominion relief policy will not be extended to take care of these, and advised that "no further action can be taken until the necessary arrangements have been completed with the Dominion government in order to secure the credit for the operation of this policy.
